Asasax Art Gallery

WITHOUT COLOR, "PEOPLE DIE"™

Asasax Art Gallery features the work of Khmer painter Asasax, including his work in acrylic, oils and mixed media. Vibrant and dynamic, Asasax's images of Khmer life and the temple monuments burst with energy, filled with exuberant brushwork and intense applications of color.

The gallery also sells t-shirts and reproductions of the artist's work, as well as stone carvings based on his images. Asasax Gallery has a branch in Phnom Penh, located just opposite the entrance to the National Museum.

MCDERMOTT GALLERY FCC

McDermott Gallery at the FCC (Foreign Correspondents' Club) is exhibiting two classic series of fine art photographs of Angkor by John McDermott and Kenro Izu. McDermott's exhibition Elegy: Reflections on Angkor and his new book of the same name are the result of a 15-year art project that capture the ancient ruins in all their moody, surreal beauty. Izu's internationally celebrated series Passage to Angkor is a collection of exquisite platinum prints, created using a late 19th century technique.

MCDERMOTT GALLERY OLD MARKET

Dedicated to exhibiting fine art photography, McDermott Gallery represents established and emerging photographers from around the world. Exhibitions change every few months, and represented artists include Peter Steinhauer, Dominic Rouse, and Stiev Selepak.

Currently on display is John McDermott's breathtaking new fine art photography of Angkor. The otherworldly sepia images, shot in McDermott's signature style, are the finale of his 15-year art project. Titled Elegy: Reflections on Angkor, the exhibition celebrates the publication of his book of the same name. Printed in Italy by noted art printing house Editoriale Bortolazzi Stei, the book Elegy features over 100 of McDermott's images and is a work of art in itself.
